And Paderborn makes fun... It hosts the grand Libori carnival during the last week of July. This is majestically heralded by the ringing of the Cathedral bells. And at the very time of this festival, the city virtually arrives to a standstill. :o)

On the other hand, you'll get a lot of other occasions here to celebrate throughout the year. The Luna Park Fair, the Spring Festival, and the shooting festival are all drawing attention to both city-dwellers and visitors alike.

It has effectively established itself as a city rich in culture in its own right. Owing to its cultural munificence, if you love spirituality in the lap of nature, you'll find it a viable place to hang out.

Various libraries, music schools, and the Westfälische Kammerspiele theater attract a huge number of visitors. By means of its diverse concert and theater programs, the city has acquired a sort of reputation in the neighboring areas. Church music in the Cathedral and significant exhibitions and festivals all substantiate the city's enlightening triumph.

At the education front, Paderborn is not lagging far behind in comparison to other German cities. On one occasion was the oldest intellectual place of Westphalia region. It saw its first university in the year of 1614 and presently boasts of quite a few theological and private academic institutes. It even has the largest computer museum in the world!

The city also takes account of a well connected airport — the Paderborn/Lippstadt Airport [PAD] in Büren — which connects it to the bigger German airports and also puts forward flights to numerous locations in Europe.
