The district capital of Bad Segeberg is a place worthy of a cultural visit. It is nationally famous as the location of one of the largest Karl-May-Festivals in the country. This German writer is acclaimed across the nation, and many of his productions are staged in the large amphitheater in the town center.

Many of the southern towns in the Segeberg District are actually suburbs of Hamburg itself — several are linked by the underground system there. All are very highly populated.

However, most of the northern towns are more rural and relaxed. For example, Bad Bramstedt is a well known spa for the treatment of rheumatism — so take time out here, and enjoy! :-)
